Program title	Law
Level of higher academic education	Bachelor's Program
Program Description	One of the most important specialties in the field of higher education in modern civilized states is law, and the existence of a law school is a topic of state importance. The reason here is clear and simple - the foundation of the rule of law is a strong civil society, which, in turn, recognizes fundamental human rights and freedoms as the supreme value. There is a constant need to balance the relationship between the state and the citizens, to study, to establish a number of restrictions, to recognize and ensure freedoms. Statistics show that the demand for quality legal education is quite high. The content of the SEU Law Undergraduate Program is completely different from other current undergraduate programs, as evidenced by the structure of the program and the variety of courses offered. The mission of the program Rapid and timely response to the challenges in the field is the constant updating of the program - systematic synchronization of the content and structure of the elective courses distinguishes the BSc Law program. By providing the highest quality modern legal education, program graduates are guaranteed to acquire, along with the knowledge necessary for employment, the professional, practical skills that will help them become successful lawyers. The BSc Law Program offers several completely new disciplines that have been developed for this program as an elective course in the specialty. In this regard, it is worth mentioning the thorough training in the field of human rights, the provision of energy law and environmental issues, sports law and other training courses. Particular emphasis is placed on teaching methods such as problem-based teaching, which in turn includes several methods, and students, in addition to the ability to work independently to solve a problem in various fields of law, develop the skills necessary to practice law. The program includes a mandatory component in the form of a practical skills and professional ethics course. The course is conducted within the framework of a legal clinic located in Seu, which is led by experienced practicing lawyers. Especially noteworthy is the cooperation with the LEPL Legal Aid Service, which is directly involved in providing free legal aid to target groups. The program is attended by academic and visiting staff, most of whom have received legal education in leading European universities, have conducted research and at the same time are engaged in practical activities. The program is also attended by practicing lawyers who lead the practical part of the training courses and / or lead the course independently.
